A novel method of calling attention to the merits of a popular brand of coffee is employed in the window of a local grocery store window and has attracted the notice of more than one passerby. A cardboard street is bordered by a miniature store, in the window of which is displayed a circular announcing the sale of the coffee. By an ingenious mechanical device, a number of little women are made to gaze at the window for a few seconds and then to pass inside the store, each emerging shortly with a package of the coffee. The purchaser then continues on her way home, apparently where the bystander is left to presume, the coffee is subject to a highly satisfactory trial.

The last show to-night will mark the close of an excellent program of vaudeville at the Pavilion. Both acts have proved to be of a kind that wins popularity. Doblado's trained sheep and pigs have been the big attraction and are worthy of the patronage they received. Mr. Doblado is worthy of compliments in making the act a comedy offering, as well as a trained animal act. In doing so he has made it considerably different from the usual trained animal act offered to the public. Henry H. Myers, the comedian, keeps the audience in a very happy mood with his comical sayings and songs. Two new pictures come today, one a stirring western drama, the other a comedy picture. Both are new to the picture fans of the city.
